ter•ror•ism (noun)

a violent act

by non-governmental actors

to create fear

for political purposes

“terrorism from below”      vs.      “terrorism from above”

incident profile

ABU HAFS AL-MASRI BRIGADE AND SECRET ORGANIZATION OF AL-QAEDA IN EUROPE ATTACKED TRANSPORTATION TARGET (JULY 7, 2005, UNITED KINGDOM)

Incident Date: July 7, 2005

Terrorist Organization(s): Abu Hafs al-Masri Brigade , Secret Organization of al-Qaeda in Europe

Target: Transportation

City: London

Country: United Kingdom

Region: Western Europe

Tactic: Bombing

Weapon: Explosives

Fatalities: 27

Injuries: 0

RAND-MIPT data

- 40 years (1968-2008)
- domestic + international
- 5000+ cities, 187 countries
- 36,018 events (37% deadly)

terrorist organizations

10,335 events attributed to 910 identifiable orgs.

381 groups kill 1+

3,249 fatal events

attribution matters a little

50% of “severe” events by:

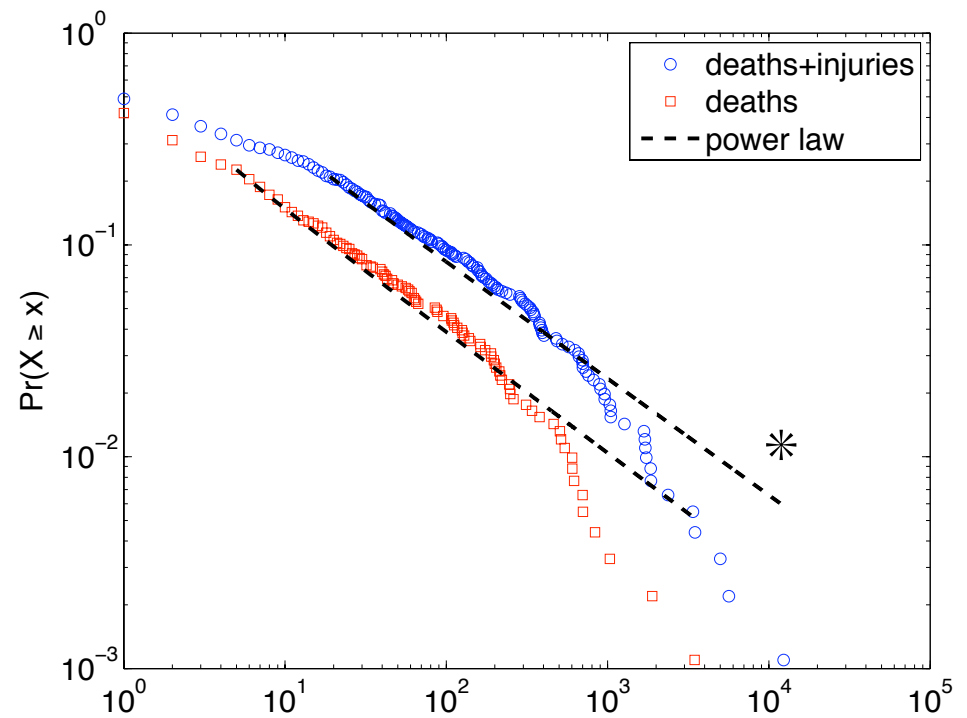

- al-Qaeda in Iraq (46)
- Tamil Tigers (23)
- Hamas (20)
- al-Qaeda (16)
- Taliban (15)
- Ansaral-Sunnah Army (15)
- FARC (13)
- Hezbollah (12)
- Mujahideen Shura Council (11)
- Lord’s Resistance Army (11)
- Islamic State of Iraq (10)
- Fatah (9)

most groups uninteresting

total number of events

total casualties

*these are not plausible power laws,  $p < 0.1$

most groups die quickly

behavioral dynamics of terrorist groups

behavioral dynamics of terrorist groups

traditional studies:

- political motivation,
- strategic choices,
- organizational structure,
- material support, etc.

behavioral dynamics of terrorist groups

but, given that a terrorist group acts:

- do its attacks change over its lifetime?
- how do they change?
- are there patterns?
- are these patterns stationary?
- can we make predictions?

are dynamics stationary?

how does terrorism progress? a hypothesis

how does terrorism progress? a hypothesis

attacks → recruitment → growth → more attacks

group size and age determine rate of attack (terrorist “cells” largely interchangeable, size is main limitation on rate)

test this hypothesis using data

development curves

(a.k.a. “experience” curves)

development curves

plots group's behavior as function of maturity  $k$

- facilitates inter-group comparisons
- frequency (time between attacks  $\Delta t$ )
- severity (deaths  $x$ )

development curves

examples:

development curves

behavior

number of events

examples:

frequency of attacks

time between attacks

event number

individual curves

combine these curves to extract typical trajectory

typical curve

truncated, shifted log-normal

$$\left\{ p(\log \Delta t) \propto \exp \left[ \frac{-(\log \Delta t + \beta \log k - \mu)^2}{2\sigma^2} \right] \right\}$$

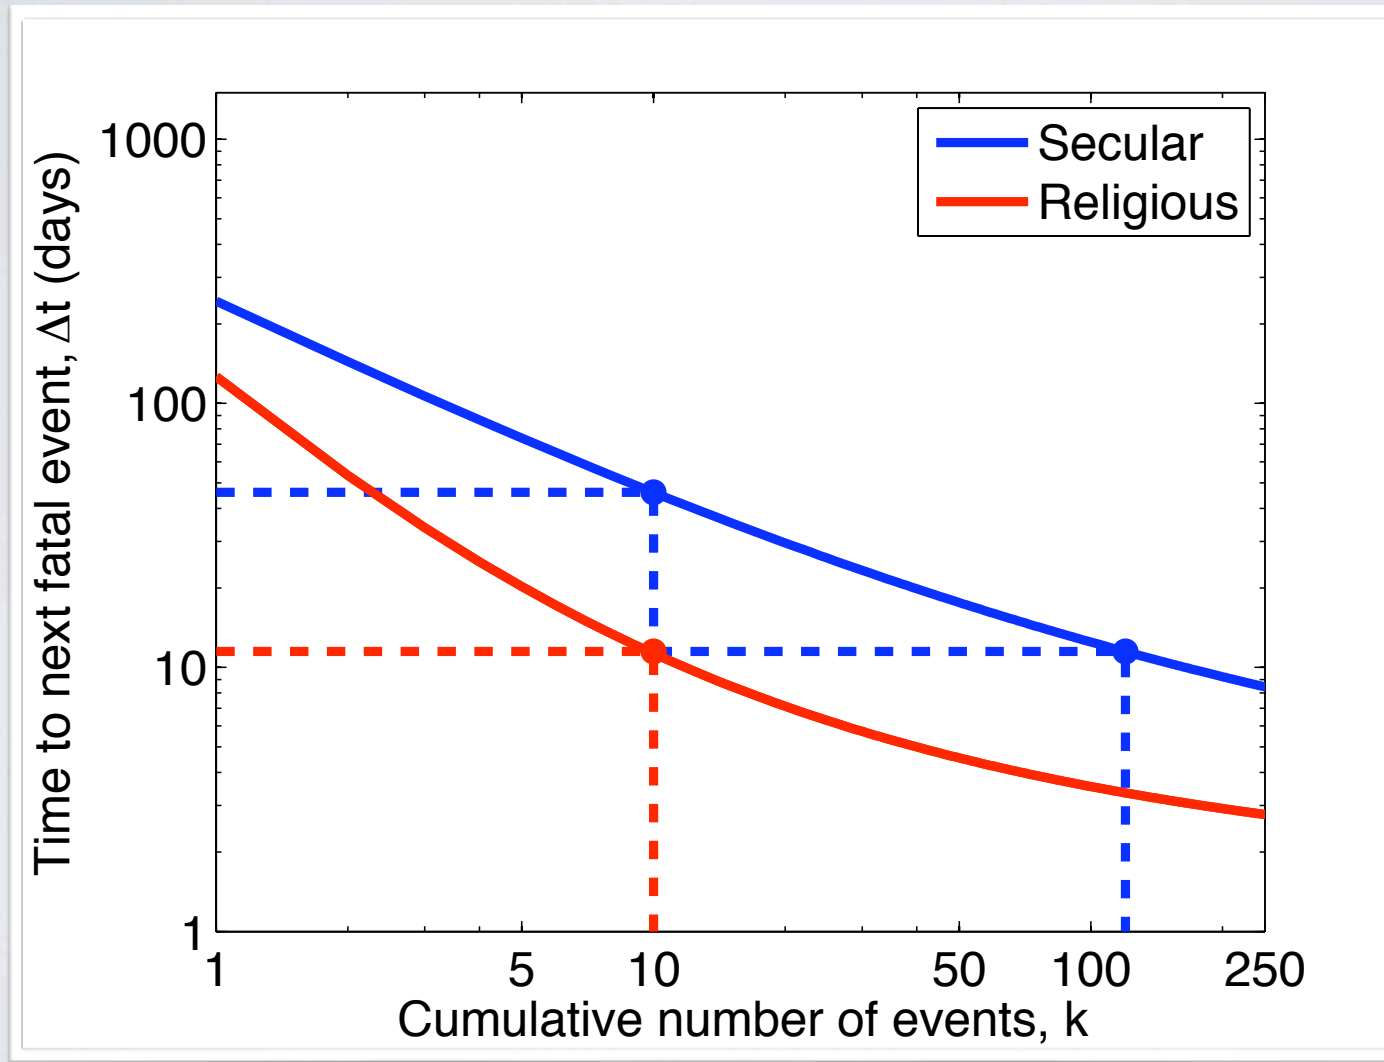

note: events can't be considered strictly independent:  $p = 0.00 \pm 0.03$

forecasting?

secular vs. religious terrorism

secular vs. religious terrorism

experience curves: cost vs. “time”

“our strategy is to get big fast” Jeff Bezos of Amazon.com

experience curves: cost vs. “time”

terrorist groups act like businesses

(whose “product” is terrorist attacks)

labor constrained industry

(more people = more attacks  $\neq$  more severe attacks; what about cyber?)

even terrorists face universal social constraints

attack severity

individual curves

typical curve

invariant distribution  $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} p(x | k) \propto x^{-\alpha} \quad x \geq 1 \end{array} \right\}$

note: there is more structure in  $p(x)$  than we expect from this strict power-law distribution

why does attack rate accelerate?

organizational learning

organizational learning

existing members become more efficient (better planning, coordination, execution)

organizational learning

(better planning, coordination, execution)

unfortunately, very hard to test empirically

(little data on terrorist event planning)

organizational growth

new, replaceable, independent members

(recruit new, independent terrorist cells)

organizational growth

new, replaceable, independent members

(recruit new, independent terrorist cells)

predicts delay and size are inversely proportional

$$\Delta t \propto 1/s$$

size matters

The Nature of the Beast: Organizational Structures and the Lethality of Terrorist Attacks

Victor Asal University at Albany—State University of New York

R. Karl Rethemeyer University at Albany—State University of New York

order-of-magnitude estimates of maximum size over 1998-2005
for 381 terrorist groups

prediction:  $\min(\Delta t) \propto 1 / \max(s)$

delay decreases with size

organizational growth

new, replaceable, independent members

(recruit new, independent terrorist cells)

but, are larger groups better at killing?

severity independent of size

organizational growth

new, replaceable, independent members

(recruit new, independent, interchangeable terrorist cells)

attacks → growth via recruitment → more attacks

(organizational learning may still play a role

predicting the future

predicting the future

given we know only

- severity of an event by some group,

can we predict

- delay until next event by same group
- severity of that event

predicting the future

$$\Delta t \approx 28.1 \text{ days}$$

independent of severity

$$x_{t+1} \approx 2x_t^{1/4}$$

strong attenuation

summary

- many robust patterns in terrorist group behavior
- a group's attack rate accelerates as with age (but group motivation matters)
- feedback loop between attack frequency and size
- terrorist groups like start-up companies
(whose product is terrorist attacks)
- attack severity follows invariant power law (which does not change with group age or size)
- delay independent of severity; recurrent severity strongly attenuated

some open questions

- do terrorist organizations learn?
- what organizational factors determine  $\beta$  ?
  - ideology matters. why? what else?
- where does power law for severity come from?
- can we forecast behavior of individual groups?
- how do these organizations die?
- what is predictable about future terrorist attacks?
